I. Course Overview

1. Course Description: World Cinema and Postcolonialism: The Undead in Asian Film

This course explores the figure of the zombie and the undead in global cinema, with a special focus on Asian film and postcolonial theory. From fast-moving infected to slow, spectral zombies, these films reflect social anxieties about globalization, modernity, historical trauma, and systemic collapse. By analyzing films across Korea, Taiwan, Japan, and the West, students will consider how the undead represents more than horror—serving as metaphors for the unresolved past and the failures of the present.
